TO HONOR FATHER AT LAST

Movement Under Way to Place Neglected Parent on Pedestal and Strew Roses at His Feet.

At last poor old father is to have his day. For these many moons he has been singing the praises of mother—and deservedly—and telling of what a dreary world it would be without her, and all the while father has been standing around as unnoticed and as neglected as the bridegroom at the wedding. He has been looked upon, or rather tolerated, as a necessary evil. Indeed, he has been spoken of, in some quarters at least, in terms of reproach and derision. We all remember the beautiful ballad which blatantly called attention to the fact that everybody toiled but poor old dad. The refrain of that song was taken up everywhere, and the enthusiasm with which it was sung by all sorts and conditions of people would lead one to suspect that the author had made a remarkable discovery, which he was only too glad to share with the world.

Now all this is to be changed and dad is to be placed on a pedestal and flowers laid at his unworthy feet and verses recited in his honor. The red rose has been selected as an appropriate emblem for father, and on one day in the year everybody—or nearly everybody—is to wear that flower in order to let the world know that, in spite of all his faults, they dearly love the old man. This just and proper recognition has been a long while in coming, but now that it is at hand there seems to be a disposition to do it with a wholeheartedness that will atone for past neglect. The only one who will not quite understand it will be dear old dad himself. He will do as he is told, of course, but we venture to say that the movement is going to make father scratch his head in wonder, if not in delight.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY IS NEXT

Manufacturers Have But Lately Used Waste Products and Housewife Will Adopt Plan Soon.

An important factor in the industrial prosperity of the world is the utilization of waste products. It has not been long, as time goes, since packers learned that they would use all of the pig except his squeal. Sawdust, which was formerly thrown away, is now the chief fuel of many lumber mills, or from it great quantities of wood alcohol are manufactured. The industrial world has learned to take its profits from what yesterday were waste products.

There is a fortune left every morning in American coffee cups. It is estimated that the average person uses at least a fifth more sugar than the liquid into which it is put absorbs. Smokers habitually throw away a stick of every cigar or cigarette lighted. Gas ranges are kept burning because they "will be needed in a few minutes." Electric meters hum merrily because people feel that it is hardly worth while to put out the lights when they will be needed again in an hour or so. Food which might readily be prepared for another meal is thrown away. Possibly a fourth of the cost of upkeep of every American home is unnecessary cost, which could be avoided by frugality and the employment of common sense.

The elimination of waste has not become a general object in housekeeping. We have learned the value of economy in manufacturing, but we have not applied economic principles to the administration of the household.

Americans and the Rich.

The United States is perhaps the only country in the world in which money, in itself, carries no public honor or with it, and in which even the most lavish heaving of coins to the rabble goes unrewarded. An English Carnegie would have had a seat in the house of lords twenty years ago; a French Rockefeller would have sported the grand cordon of the Legion of Honor before he ever sported a toupee; a German Morgan could never have escaped the Red Eagle and privy council. But in the United States a great fortune is the most effective of all bars to public dignity and preferment, and even to private respect. Our Ryans and Harrimans are not idols, but targets; the one sure way to make a stir in politics is to attack them successfully.—H. L. Mencken in Smart Set.

German Postal Automobiles.

A system has been established in Germany by which the postal automobiles are made use of to bring relief from the larger cities to smaller ones threatened by fire. Only the larger cities of Germany are supplied with fire-fighting apparatus, and in the event of fire or a serious conflagration happening in one of them located at a distance of more than ten miles from an established fire department, the apparatus will be secured to a postal automobile and drawn to the scene of the fire. The system was recently availed of and valuable assistance rendered to the village of Walsdorf, which would have been wiped out but for the help thus secured.

An Ostracized Flag.

The minister of the Boston South Congregational church said the other day:

"Instead of the cross I should like to see the white flag on the topmost spire of every Christian church. On the flag of faith, there floating aloft, I would put the Christian star of Bethlehem."

It would be legal on a church spire, but under the new Massachusetts law it could not be carried in a parade.
